

Sleeping Lady Conference and Retreat Center

Project Overview

The collaborative commitment of the client, the design team, and the construction team toward environmental stewardship and energy and resource efficiency mandated at the outset of project planning is manifest throughout this Bullitt Foundation facility. Overall operating efficiency is based on minimal development and investments in building envelopes, heat recovery ventilation systems, efficient lighting, and diligent management. The cabins are built in part from old cabins on the site, and no trees were removed in the construction of the center.

Location:

Leavenworth Washington
United States

Submitting Architect:

Jones & Jones Architects and Landscape Architects

Source URL: <http://www.ncat.aiatopten.org/node/531>